Developing an award-winning brand identity from the ground up

When Zhongyin Cashmere bought the 140-year-old Todd & Duncan brand, they had big plans to bring it to the US market and update the Scottish label's historic image for a new generation of fashion-forward, luxury consumers. They turned to Hagopian Ink to get that job done.

A visual brand based on heritage and luxury

Hagopian Ink worked with Todd & Duncan on a large-scale project that developed a brand identity design and overall marketing and web strategy for the US rollout. The first phase focused on visual branding including logo, stationery system, business cards, store signage, in-store hang tags, shopping bags and custom boxes. We took care to ensure that the visual identity highlighted Todd & Duncan's Scottish heritage as a signature element, and carried forward the quality, craftsmanship, luxury, modern elegance and sophistication of the cashmere line for future growth.

PHILOSOPHY

Inspiration stems from a combination of the tonal complexity of northern sky lines to the work of LA artist, Ingrid Calame, whose linear drawings and abstract paintings begin life as paper tracings that connect to the real world: from graffiti on the streets of LA to renaissance techniques, to create artistic fusions of line, form, texture and colour.
